Welcome to MPG Real Estate

If you're considering an Investment in Aruba Real Estate, now is a great time to invest!

It's a Buyer's Market on Aruba!

If you are in the market for a vacation retreat or a second home, there is no better time to invest in the real estate market on Aruba than right now. On average, Aruba's price per square foot of island paradise is roughly half that of other similar luxury Caribbean destinations, according to a recent New York Times article published in December of 2016.

Affordable real estate prices combined with Aruba's solid infrastructure and close ties to the Netherlands, more days of sunshine than most other Caribbean islands, its proximity outside of the hurricane belt, and low crime rate position the island as the premier location for your dream home.

There to assist you in every step towards your real estate purchase is the team at MPG, led by Muna Habash, a top real estate professional on the island. Ms. Habash has been featured in three real estate features in the New York Times, providing valuable insight and knowledge of the local real estate market.

Shares Ms. Habash, "Whether you are interested in buying or selling a house, condo, villa, commercial property, or land we can help. Our many years of experience in Aruba's real estate market, as well as our financing and professional networking, afford us the expertise and ability to give you the best professional advice—from financing to all legal paperwork and documentation—to successfully purchase your dream island home!"

A Bid in Paradise

Before an auction at the notary can take place there is a specific process in which a number of steps, as dictated by law, have to be completed. The notary can auction on behalf of mortgagor (in most cases a bank), a creditor with a repossession order or on behalf of the owner (voluntary auction). When the notary is instructed to hold an auction, a date is set. By law, the owner of the object must be informed (if the auction isn't voluntary), the items to be auctioned and special auction conditions must be published and usually there is an option for a direct bid. To go to auctions means extra costs, so it is favorable for all parties, the client, the owner of the auctioned property and the potential buyer, to find a solution before an item goes to auction. Usually, it is possible to make a (private) bid within a time limit set by law. Note that a private bid is not possible at an auction based on repossession. Though it seems an easy score at first glance, an auction can result in a less than the hoped-for result. Namely, there is no opportunity to inspect the property / object; in most cases only an appraisal report is made available to the buyer, there are several candidates who all want the best price and the client reserves the right to withdraw. If you are interested to bid at the auction, it is advised to do research or to enlist the help of an experienced professional, like a broker, to avoid disappointment. When making a (private) bid a valid ID and a banker's guarantee are required.

When making a (private) bid a valid ID and a banker's guarantee are required.

Step 1: Opening of the auction

The style of the auction in Aruba is "bidding and junction". This way of auctioning is so typically Dutch that the term "Dutch Auction" is used in English. Customary the notary opens the auction as the auctioneer. He explains how the auction works, and that the course of events will be documented in detail per item in a deed, reads the special auction conditions and tries to warm the public for the first part of the auction, the bidding war.

Notariskantoor Yarzagaray & Partners

www.notarisaruba.com | info@notarisaruba.com

Opening hours on businessdays: 08:00 - 12:00 & 13:30 - 17:00

Step 2: Let's start bidding.

Of each object, the notary gives a brief explanation and an overview of the cost and minimal bid. The auctioneer asks the audience to bid above the starting bid. Anyone can bid or make a higher bid by raising their hand. The person with the highest bid is called the bettor. His or her bid is referred to as the 'opening bid'. After the release of the highest bid (adopted after the usual "once, twice, we have a bettor" and a stroke of the hammer of the auctioneer), the notary, will add the information of the bettor to the deed.

"Most people associate the word auction with an auctioneer and hammer calling the final bid on antiques or a garage sale to the highest bidder:

An invaluable collector's item for a true bargain.

A notary can also hold auctions. Usually these are registered properties such as houses, land or ships."

Step 3: The Dutch auction

During the second round, the notary will name an amount (well) above the starting bid. The notary reduces the amount gradually until it reaches the starting bid. The final bid is reached if someone in the audience calls "mijn" (mine in Dutch). It is entirely possible that someone other than the bettor calls this round; it all depends on how much someone is willing to pay. If no one calls this round, the property is ceded to the bettor.

Step 4: After the auction

After the auction the creditor reserves the right during the first business day until 17.00 to not accept the bid. When the bid is too low the creditor may decide to keep the object anyway to sell it in a different way. Hence the person making the bid (bettor or miner) isn't automatically the new owner.

If there are no concerns the notary draws up a deed transferring the property to the new owner.
